

For my Beautiful Wife,

This letter is hard for me to write because I don't know what lies ahead of me, or how long my memories will be with me. I want you to know that you have been the love of my life, my whole life, my partner in crime, my soul mate, my everything. My life would be nothing without you or the kids by my side, every step of the way. From the moment I lay eyes on you, I knew you were the one that I wanted to spend the rest of my life with. Though our time together will be cut short, due to this terrible disease, I want you to know that every day was a blessing for me.

On our first date, I remember the red dress that you wore and the way your golden hair fell in curls to your shoulders. We went to that French restaurant downtown and I tried so hard to look sophisticated and cultured and to impress you, but truth be told, all I really wanted was a steak and a beer. I remember feeling so anxious and I wondered if you would be interested in me or would give me a second date. I thought you were so beautiful, and when you smiled at me, my heart skipped a beat. Your laugh is so incredibly contagious and every time I hear it, it makes me smile and encourages all those around you to smile as well. I felt such pride walking into the restaurant with you on my arm, and how everyone just stared at us.

Our Wedding day was the most memorable day ever and I remember it like it was yesterday. As sick as I get, and as forgetful that I am going to be, I don't ever want to forget the image of how beautiful you looked in your dress. Watching you walk towards me down the aisle, how our eyes locked and how it felt like we were the only two people in the world in that moment. The dance at our reception was so much fun, there were smiles all around the room, all night long. We danced and danced and danced!!!! You have still got those sweet moves my Love!!!! Unmatched by mine, mind you, but we can sure cut a rug together!!
